Looking for a challenge?

Skilled Tax Professionals are the foundation of HM Revenue & Customs and have access to a wide variety of career paths - no two days are the same. You could spend one day on surveillance, the next you could help shut down a £2 million money laundering scam.

After your training, you could be working with blue chip companies, getting involved with international and corporation tax, leading fraud investigations, developing policy, resolving tax disputes and offering specialist advice to a whole range of people.

It's fascinating, vital work that ensures the UK has the money it needs to fund its public services. You'll receive ongoing structured training, paid study leave and expert guidance at every step. With £468 billion annual revenue we're one of the UK's biggest businesses, so you'll be in good hands.

The four-year Tax Professional Development programme has a starting salary of £27,045 (£29,256 London). On completion you can expect promotion and a starting salary currently at £46,983 (£52,669 London).

You must have a 2.2 degree or equivalent (at application or before September 2012) to fulfil our requirements. Contact us by 30 November 2011 and look forward to an exciting career with us.
